ABOUT LoLa

The LoLa (low latency) tool, coupled with advanced research and education networks, allows geographically distributed musicians, dancers, actors and other artists to work together in real time without significant distortion or delay. The technology has been in use in music schools in Europe, North America and elsewhere for teaching, masterclasses, rehearsals and performances since its first public demonstration in 2010, and is now available in Eastern Partnership countries thanks to the EaPConnect project. The LoLa project research and development team is a collaboration between Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Tartini, Trieste, and the Italian research and academic network, GARR. The idea for LoLa was conceived in 2005 and was commended by the international research and education networking community with a GÉANT Community Award in 2017.

ABOUT EaPConnect

The Eastern Partnership Connect (EaPConnect) project sets out to create a regional research and education (R&E) network in Eastern Europe and the Southern Caucasus. This will interconnect the national R&E networks (NRENs) in six Eastern Partnership (EaP) countries and integrate them with the pan-European GÉANT network. The partner countries are Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Moldova and Ukraine. The overall objective is to decrease the digital divide, improve intra-regional connectivity and facilitate participation of local scientists, students and academics in global R&E collaborations. By interconnecting the R&E communities across the region and with their European counterparts, EaPConnect will create a gateway for talented individuals in the EaP countries to be truly global players. EaPConnect is managed by the networking organisation GÉANT in collaboration with the NRENs in the six beneficiary partner countries, and includes associate partners from other world regions. The European Commission's Directorate-General for Neighbourhood and Enlargements Negotiations (DG NEAR) is contributing 95% (€13m) to the cost of the EaPConnect project.
